Blogging can open a lot of opportunity doors for you and help you make a difference not only in your personal and professional life but also in the lives of your readers.

Of course, spreading the word about it and attracting the right kind of readers who will find your content interesting and useful requires having good and efficient strategies in place.

So what are you going to do? Well, your homework, for starters; you've got to know your stuff to stand out in this crowd. A good place to start might be this article with the list of the best blogs on the web. Find the people who are doing what you want to do, and doing it well. Then take their best practices, find your own spin to put on the concept, and write, write, write!

What exactly is a blog?

Let us quickly go over what is a blog? A blog (shortened from the phrase "weblog") is a website or a web page that is updated on a regular basis with content that the readers of the blog can find inspirational or educational. A blog can have different purposes, such as raising the awareness of an individual cause or a brand, establishing one's self as an expert in a particular field, or promoting a business and increasing sales, to name just a few. It all depends on the type of blog, of course.

Your blog can be your online journal, for instance, where you will express your thoughts and feelings and share them with the world. It can be anything you want it to be, but the key to its success is providing real value to your readers using a friendly and conversational tone of voice while remaining consistent.

What best blogs have in common?

There are thousands of blogs on the web, but how did the truly successful bloggers manage to cut through the noise of competition and push their blogs to the top? They provided content that offered real value to their readers. They had a unique voice that their readers wanted to hear and that is exactly what made them different. That makes for some stiff competition for new entrants to the blogosphere trying to make their name.

Even if a topic that you want to tackle includes an idea that has been told thousand times over, you can still make a twist and tell your story. You can create compelling content that will have a unique personality that your readers can relate to and truly fall in love with every single word you write.

Quality content is exactly what all the favorite blogs have in common. Of course, there's the number of followers, but the content is the only element that attracts them in the first place and keeps them coming back for more.

Therefore, if you want to make your blog attractive, always focus on the quality of your content.

Want to launch a personal blog?

If you want to launch your very own personal blog, you can do so pretty quickly on your own. Once you choose a name for your blog (domain name) and a blogging platform, there are a couple more steps that you need to take, all of which are very straightforward, and you can have your blog up and running in no time.

You will need to choose your web hosting provider and for new bloggers, we recommend Bluehost, a company that powers over 2 million websites worldwide. You will get a free domain name when you sign up with them, plus they offer a 30-day money-back guarantee.

It is recommended by 99% of the blogging experts and WordPress.org named it as one "of the best and brightest of the hosting world".

If this is your first time getting a hosting account, we suggest starting with the basic plan, because you will need time to determine your needs and options. The basic plan has everything any beginner needs to set up a new blog. Consider other plans later when your blog takes off and your needs become greater.

If for some reason you decide to go with the other web hosting company the process might be slightly different but most of the steps should be very similar.

Remember, after you launch your blog and start typing away your content, you need to always focus on your target audience and their needs so that you can provide them with real value and quality because that is what will make your blog successful.
